Iestimony to Prove That Mrs. Carpen ter Killed Her Husband While Insane. Upon the opening of the Criminal Courses morning the trial of Henrietta L. Car renter, charged with the murder of her i usband, George W, Carpenter, on De-cember 25, 1883, was resumed and the tes-

A. D. Prince testified that the defendant was employed as a servant in his family in January, 1884, and her actions being very curious, she was kept only two very curious, she was kept only two weeks.

Dr. Alexander McWilliams, physician at the jail, testified to her quiet dovide conduct in jail.

Dr. W. W. Godding, superintendent of the Insane Asylum, testified that there were now about 1,200 patients in the hospital. He said that insanity had herediary tendencies, and that if an insane man begot a child the child would be apt to become insane. The witness showed by the record of the hospital that John W. Bailey was admitted to the hospital in March. 1855, and died two years later. The witness also read the record of Annie Robinson, daughter of John Bailey, who was received and died in the hospital.

Mrs. Carpenter, the defendant, was then called to testify. She gave her testimony in a clear manner, and did not appear confused in her examination. She denied emphatically that she had written to Mr. Davis, his employer, the letter purporting to be from Carpenter. She said that the skull of the murdered man which was shown her was not her husband's.

that the skull of the murdered man which was shown her was not her husband's. The hole for the neck was not large enough. She saw her husband for the last time about 7 o'clock on Christmas evening, 1883, when he left the house and met a man outside. The feeling between her husband and herself was friendly. He had always called her "Queen."

On cross-examination Mrs. Carpenter said that when her husband left the house he said "Good by, I am going away to the he said "Good by. I am going away to the West." The rest of the examination brought out nothing new and at its close
